Comprehensive Needs Assessment Data

Per SBE Regulation 43-261, the annual needs assessment will provide focus for planning teams to set priorities for the plan. The comprehensive needs assessment must identify targeted areas of discrepancy between the desired performance levels and the current status as indicated by available data. Any discrepancies in the following areas identified by the school and district report cards must be included in the plan: (1) achievement, (2) achievement by subgroups, (3) graduation rates, (4) attendance, (5) discipline, (6) teacher/administrator quality and professional growth, and (7) other priority areas.

Measurable performance goals, written in five-year increments, shall be developed to address the major areas of discrepancy found in the needs assessment in key areas reported in the district and school report cards.

Directions: Provide additional district's needs assessment data including both formative and summative assessments used to gauge student learning. (Charts, graphs, or other formats of data may be used.) Note: A link to the school report card will no longer be accepted.

Student Achievement, including sub-groups

*Since the 5th grade will be moving into the elementary grade span during the life of this plan. The team made efforts in their goal development to make this transition as seamless as possible.

The first task that needed to be accomplished before we could begin setting our goals was to establish what we test would use to measure student achievement. MAP is no longer used, and the SC Ready is a norm-referenced test that does not provide individual diagnostic and growth data. Therefore, we considered using iReady instead.

Through conversations, we gained a collaborative understanding that iReady shows teachers what students know, and it shows how the students are performing on grade-level expectations. In addition, iReady tells us how much growth students need to reach or maintain grade-level proficiency, and then it provides students with differentiated grade-level instruction with their individualized learning path. The team liked that iReady started in the classroom. Both teachers and students set goals using iReady. Teachers use iReady as their SLO measure, and we know that iReady is closely correlated to the SC Ready test, so if our students are growing and meeting grade-level mastery, our SC Ready scores will reflect that as well. Choosing iReady as a measure for student achievement allows the strategic plan to be a document that is used to assist academic needs and decisions, as we have a measure that allows for constant progress monitoring.

After choosing our assessment, the team discussed how we were going to determine our benchmark. The team split into two sections, one section for ELA and one section for Math, with the task of determining our yearly benchmarks, our goals, strategies, activities, and our progress monitoring to support the goals. Initially we thought we would use iReady target goals for each student, allowing the teacher to set the goal based on student needs, thus choosing between using typical growth or stretch growth. However, after further conversation, it was decided that our lower achieving students could meet their typical growth, as determined by their iReady learning pathway, but still not meet their grade-level proficiency. Therefore, we decided that we would use the stretch goal for students at all levels since the stretch growth goal gave the best opportunity for students to reach grade level and above.

In both Reading and Math, the team decided that we will have the same two goals to allow for the consistency and usability of the plan, with only the benchmark data being different. In addition, we also wanted the strategies to be as similar as possible. Strategy One focuses on using data to guide reading and math instruction, progress monitoring, and determine action plans for teacher and student goal setting. Strategy Two provides support to teachers for them to stay current in research-based reading and math practices by receiving support through professional development, collaboration with colleagues, and classroom resources that will benefit students. Activities and progress monitoring were then set to support both the goals and their respective strategies.

In our final meeting, the challenge was to determine the trajectory for each goal that addressed the impact of COVID learning loss without having sufficient prior iReady data as a result of COVID. After much discussion, the team decided to use 1.5% growth per year as the target. In reviewing these targets with the district strategic plan cabinet, and after looking at additional school-level data, we decided to move the trajectory from less ambitious targets to targets that were more in line with the district Academic Recovery Plan. Our Academic Recovery Plan set iReady student growth targets based on the tier levels of learning loss of 50% for students with mild loss meeting their stretch growth target, 75% for students with moderate loss meeting their stretch growth target, and 100% for students with severe loss meeting their stretch growth target. With this in mind, If you multiply the number of students in each tier by the "weight" of each tier in terms of percent meeting stretch, then divide that weighted figure into the total for any given grade level, it works out to about 51%, which we believe is attainable over time. We feel like it would be advantageous to set higher targets and come up a little short of our goal than by setting our targets too low.

2026-27 UPDATE: After consultation with stakeholders, Curriculum Associates (iReady vendor), and teachers, the district has updated its goal structure for the 2026-27 school year. The initial goals chosen were not feasible as the district did not see the initial expected rebound from performance loss due to the pandemic. The district has increased performance in the years of this plan, but not at the level expected by the initial high targets, and the district remains at a criterion-based performance level above both the nation and state on the iReady diagnostic.

Since the 5th grade will be moving into the elementary grade span during the life of this plan. The team made efforts in their goal development to make this transition as seamless as possible.

The first task that needed to be accomplished before we could begin setting our goals was to establish what we test would use to measure student achievement. MAP is no longer used, and the SC Ready is a norm-referenced test that does not provide individual diagnostic and growth data. Therefore, we considered using iReady instead.

Through conversations, we gained a collaborative understanding that iReady shows teachers what students know, and it shows how the students are performing on grade-level expectations. In addition, iReady tells us how much growth students need to reach or maintain grade-level proficiency, and then it provides students with differentiated grade-level instruction with their individualized learning path. The team liked that iReady started in the classroom. Both teachers and students set goals using iReady. Teachers use iReady as their SLO measure, and we know that iReady is closely correlated to the SC Ready test, so if our students are growing and meeting grade-level mastery, our SC Ready scores will reflect that as well. Choosing iReady as a measure for student achievement allows the strategic plan to be a document that is used to assist academic needs and decisions, as we have a measure that allows for constant progress monitoring.

After choosing our assessment, the team discussed how we were going to determine our benchmark. The team split into two sections, one section for ELA and one section for Math, with the task of determining our yearly benchmarks, our goals, strategies, activities, and our progress monitoring to support the goals. Initially we thought we would use iReady target goals for each student, allowing the teacher to set the goal based on student needs, thus choosing between using typical growth or stretch growth. However, after further conversation, it was decided that our lower achieving students could meet their typical growth, as determined by their iReady learning pathway, but still not meet their grade-level proficiency. Therefore, we decided that we would use the stretch goal for students at all levels since the stretch growth goal gave the best opportunity for students to reach grade level and above.

In both Reading and Math, the team decided that we will have the same two goals to allow for the consistency and usability of the plan, with only the benchmark data being different. In addition, we also wanted the strategies to be as similar as possible. Strategy One focuses on using data to guide reading and math instruction, progress monitoring, and determine action plans for teacher and student goal setting. Strategy Two provides support to teachers for them to stay current in research-based reading and math practices by receiving support through professional development, collaboration with colleagues, and classroom resources that will benefit students. Activities and progress monitoring were then set to support both the goals and their respective strategies.

In our final meeting, the challenge was to determine the trajectory for each goal that addressed the impact of COVID learning loss without having sufficient prior iReady data as a result of COVID. After much discussion, the team decided to use 1.5% growth per year as the target. In reviewing these targets with the district strategic plan cabinet, and after looking at additional school-level data, we decided to move the trajectory from less ambitious targets to targets that were more in line with the district Academic Recovery Plan. Our Academic Recovery Plan set iReady student growth targets based on the tier levels of learning loss of 50% for students with mild loss meeting their stretch growth target, 75% for students with moderate loss meeting their stretch growth target, and 100% for students with severe loss meeting their stretch growth target. With this in mind, if you multiply the number of students in each tier by the "weight" of each tier in terms of percent meeting stretch, then divide that weighted figure into the total for any given grade level, it works out to about 51%, which we believe is attainable over time. We feel like it would be advantageous to set higher targets and come up a little short of our goal than by setting our targets too low.

2024-25 Update and Review: The district completed a reclassification of grade levels for the 2024-25 school year which resulted in a number of changes. Fifth grade is now a part of our 8 elementary schools. Berry Shoals Elementary School and Tyger River Elementary School are now part of the D5 family. Sixth grade has become a part of our 4 middle schools, and we welcome Beech Springs Middle School and Abner Creek Middle School to the D5 family. We have said goodbye to our two former Intermediate School campuses as they have made the transformatuion to their new grade comfigurations. Data in the performance goals section has been noted to have included this change beginning this year. The data continue to show growth in reading in terms of students closing gaps in learning, but students are still struggling in math. On a side note, State and National iReady Math data show Spartanbureg Five as having a significant number of students on grade level as compared to the larger populations, which encourages our continued progress in this area.

2026-27 UPDATE: After consultation with stakeholders, Curriculum Associates (iReady vendor), and teachers, the district has updated its goal structure for the 2026-27 school year. The initial goals chosen were not feasible as the district did not see the initial expected rebound from performance loss due to the pandemic. The district has increased performance in the years of this plan, but not at the level expected by the initial high targets, and the district remains at a criterion-based performance level above both the nation and state on the iReady diagnostic.

High School (9-12):

Since the 6th grade will be moving into the middle grade span during the life of this plan. The team made efforts in their goal development to make this transition as seamless as possible.

The Middle and High School team came to the consensus that we would have one clear, concise district goal for Middle/High School Achievement. The agreed upon goal is: By 2027, the percentage of secondary students on target for College and Career Readiness benchmarks will increase. We opted for one goal so that schools could really focus on student growth. We felt that the current middle/high school student achievement section of the strategic plan has too many goals. The thought was that iReady and EOCs were strong indicators of college and career readiness and that implementation of benchmarks for these assessments will result in student readiness and growth. The interim performance goals for improvement in EOC assessment scores in Algebra I and English 2 were set in line with the State of SC 2035 Overarching ESSA Goal of 90% of students at level “2” or higher on the EOC assessment.

The team then set Strategy One, Activity One, Progress Monitoring Plan for this Activity, Activity Two, and Progress Monitoring Plan for this Activity. iReady lends itself beautifully to this goal because the benchmarks are already available and implemented. Currently, there are no benchmarks that are specifically used for the EOCs. However, there are programs that are currently implemented at BHS and BFA that could work or we could explore other options. This is a discussion that would be held with the district tech team, school administration, and teachers (7-12).

The team set Activity Three, Progress Monitoring Plan for this Activity, Activity Four, and Progress Monitoring Plan for this Activity. We then met to determine the yearly targets for five years. The group felt that it was better to be conservative with the incremental growth because COVID has affected students and their academic growth and performance.

Teacher/Administrator Quality

The Teacher/Administrator Quality group began by discussing the areas in the field of education that would fall under this category. We brainstormed all topics associated with teacher and administrator quality and started placing the topics into groups. Our discussions centered around the three large areas of recruitment, development and retention. We felt that these areas communicate the natural progression of our educators. We want to recruit the best educators, develop them once they are in our district and retain them for the future. We felt strongly that these three areas needed to be our focus as we developed goals.

We created a shared document where we listed all of our brainstorming topics and three focus areas. We scheduled a follow-up meeting and asked participants to submit sample goals in these areas. At the next meeting we discussed the goals that were submitted. We knew with recruitment we wanted to build upon our District Recruitment Fair because of the success we have had hiring at this event. We wanted all of our activities to center on attracting more candidates to our own recruitment fair. We felt we needed to showcase who we are as a district. With the current teacher shortage we knew one of our goals needed to focus on retaining the teachers that are already in the district. We looked at report card data and data submitted by personnel from the supply and demand survey to determine our goal..

Finally, if we are to retain our teachers, we felt strongly that we needed to develop and grow them in the area of instruction. We used data from SC Lead reports to determine our current scores in instruction and determined where we wanted to go.

After determining the goals, we took our brainstorming topics and grouped them into activities under each goal. This was done in a shared document and participants were encouraged to comment and make suggestions for activities before we met again. We met and determined the activities that would support each goal. We decided as a group to present the development goal and activities to the curriculum and instruction team for input since they would be the group responsible for most of the activities. Great discussion took place during this meeting where they were able to make suggestions and have input on each activity. Once we finalized the activities, we worked with finance to determine budgets and timelines for each activity.

School Climate

When our committee met in November, we spent a measure of time brainstorming the things that we knew we'd like to focus on in writing our goals. The following words or phrases were discussed:

- Resilient schools
- Home/school relations and parent involvement
- Bullying (olweus refresh)
- Resource Officers
- Safer environments
- Safety Training
- Morale
- Social-Emotional Learning
- Recognition

After compiling that list, we began discussions on an overarching theme or "umbrella goal." After several passes, we settled on:

Spartanburg District Five Schools will provide an environment where every individual is physically safe, emotionally supported, and valued

All committee members were involved in, and approved, this goal. From this point, we had a few key people to meet to craft three goals. We knew we wanted to focus on the social and emotional well being of our staff and students, the safety of our staff and students, and we wanted our community to have more opportunities to be involved in our schools, so this led us to our three goals. We then divided the team among the three goals, and each "sub-committee" worked on the strategies and action steps.

We came back together in late January to fine tune the plan, and the chairperson worked on "cleaning up" the document. The committee then met on zoom in mid-February to finalize the plan before it was presented to the cabinet.

Gifted and Talented

Gifted and talented education is focused on decreasing the disparity between students in the general population and those qualifying for PIP status being identified for GT programming. In addition, in 2025-26, the district began to investigate the potential of adding a GT program in music to bolster the excellent artistic program.
